1. The landing field of the NEURUPPIN (N 53/Z 49) airfield, although in poor condition, seemed to be usable. A hangar without side walls and a dump containing about four hundred logs were at the southern edge of the field. Seven 3-story barracks, ruins of two hangars, a railroad spur track and a truck parking lot were at the eastern edge of the field. Ruins of buildings were seen along the Wittstock Allee. There were two earthbunkers and seven cantonment buildings, occupied by Soviet Army troops at the northwestern edge of the field.

2. No aircraft were parked at the field. Soldiers wearing black-bordered, red epaulets were quartered in the barracks.

- 25X1A Comment: These statements, which agree with previous information, report no reconitioning work at the NEURUPPIN airfield. The airfield evidently is not occupied by an air unit, but by an army unit.

courier aircraft occasionally land at the field.
